Unidirectional Main line Flushing in Millbrae

Ever seen our water division opening a hydrant and letting massive amounts of water run down the storm drain? It may be frustrating to see, but here's why it's important.

What Is Hydrant Flushing?

This essential maintenance activity cleans mineral deposits and particles that naturally build up in water mains over time. Our crews use the "unidirectional" method of flushing. They close valves to move water through the water main in one direction. This builds pressure, forcing water through the main line at high speed, clearing everything in the way, mineral deposits and particles that naturally build up over time. After our crews are done, the pipes are left squeaky clean.

Service Areas and Schedule

Millbrae's water system operates in four pressure zones. Following best management practices, the City alternates flushing every two years—Zones I, II, and III one year, followed by the larger Zone IV the next year. This rotation ensures all water mains are cleaned at least every two years as recommended.

View the City of Millbrae Water Pressure Zone Map \(PDF\) to view what Zone you are located in.

In flat areas, water pressure is naturally lower, making it easy for mineral deposits and particles to build up. This makes it especially important for Millbrae to flush those locations regularly.

Temporary Impacts

During flushing operations, residents and businesses may experience:

- Temporarily discolored water due to mobilized particles
- Reduced water pressure in localized areas
- Possible low-pressure alarms on commercial fire sprinkler systems

The water remains safe to use throughout the process. If you notice discolored water, run cold water from one faucet for 2-3 minutes. If it doesn't clear, wait an hour and try again.

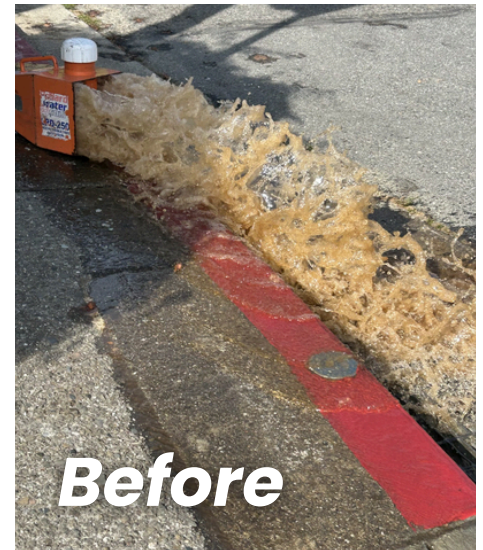

Water Conservation

The flushing program is scheduled during winter months when water demand is lower to minimize customer impact. While the process uses a significant amount of water, about one summer day of citywide irrigation, it's a requirement for good water quality, not waste. To protect San Francisco Bay, crews use environmentally safe dichlorination tablets that remove chlorine before water enters storm drains. These tablets may cause temporary bubbling, giving the water a soapy appearance.

For more information about the hydrant flushing program, contact Millbrae Public Works at (650) 259-2339 or visit City Hall at 621 Millbrae Avenue.

NO! Flushable wipes are NOT FLUSHABLE!!

Beware the story of the Hammersmith "wet wipe island"

Despite what the packaging claims, wet wipes labeled as "flushable" are causing expensive headaches for cities and homeowners alike. While these convenient cleaning products may disappear down your toilet, they don't break down like toilet paper, and that's where the trouble begins.

The scale of the wet wipe problem became dramatically clear last month in London, when authorities faced the infamous "Wet Wipe Island" near Hammersmith Bridge. This mass of wet wipes stretched 274 yards (almost three football fields) along the Thames and weighed an estimated 180 tonnes, equivalent to 15 double-decker London buses.

A 274-yard accumulation of wet wipes near Hammersmith Bridge weighs an estimated 180 tonnes, demonstrating the environmental consequences of improper disposal in London's Thames.

The cleanup operation, completed this week, removed about 5 million wet wipes marking the first mass mechanical removal of wet wipes from a UK river. Grace Rawnsley from the Port of London Authority called it "a source of environmental harm and an embarrassment to the capital."

Unlike toilet paper, which dissolves within seconds in water, wet wipes, made of synthetic materials, maintain their strength even after flushing. They combine with other debris to form massive clogs in sewer systems.

These concrete-like blockages can span entire pipe sections, requiring specialized equipment and crews to remove.

Utilities report that wipe-related service calls have increased by 300% over the past decade, and the problems don't stop at city pipes. Wet wipes frequently cause backups in residential plumbing, leading to messy situations and costly repairs.

The fix is straightforward, do not flush any product besides toilet paper. Keep a small waste basket near your toilet for easy disposal. Your pipes, your wallet, and your city's sewer workers will thank you.
